BUILD YOUR CITY WELL.

City building has become a science. Our most brainy men assemble in conventions for the purpose of exchanging experiences, discussing methods that have proven economical, practical and successful. It is recognized that ancient haphazard methods can only lead to decay. The safest and surest way of all is to make your city worth something, useful to some line or lines of business and then give it a good name by intelligent advertising. A community can be trade-marked just like a manufactured product. An advertised specialty creates markets—markets that stay created and increase from year to year. Of the well advertised trade-marked name it can be truthfully said that it is greatly to be desired because it means real riches. And it should be so of a good city. Its very name should emphasize some particular quality. This quality should be so well associated with its name that to see its name is to remember its specialty. It should be advertised to indelibly stamp this upon the minds of business men everywhere. A good opinion in the minds of business people and a preference for that particular place is seed that must grow and spread.

With Bryan her schools are her trade-mark, emphasized by her agricultural achievements. To make her schools thoroughly effective and a permanent trade-mark there must be permanency fostered in the schools. Familiar faces in faculty and plans must assist in indelibly stamping this trade-mark upon the public. The wonderful success of our schools is due to the fact that, with few exceptions, there have never been changes in management. Then a city must have a compact, progressive, intelligent government to drive the advertising still more effectively to the minds of the public. A city with her own public utilities is a great business establishment. If it is to be made worth while it must be managed. It cannot be managed without careful, intelligent thought. Careful, intelligent thought can only come from intimate relation and knowledge. This can not be cultivated by business men who are engulphed with the intricacies of complicated business affairs as they are conducted today. This city business is a science and must be conducted upon scientific lines to be successful.

ARE YOU A MEMBER?

The Commercial Club is about to publish its membership list in its new ten thousand edition folder. It will be a distinction to have your name go to all parts of the world as a member of this splendid organization. You can only become a member by making application. This list will go to press Wednesday. Do you want to vote for your town or against your town?

One of the most prominent business men of the city visited the municipal power plant this week for the first time. After going over the entire plant he was heard to remark: "I have been so busy that I could never get down here. I had no idea that this plant was of such magnitude. Bryan can certainly sell electric power and an abundance of pure water."

When we tell some people that Bryan has a population of over seven thousand they want to know where, but two or three days' drive over the city convinces the most skeptical and invariably ends with: "It has been two years since I was over the city and I had no idea so many improvements had been made."

It is passing strange that some people will absolutely refuse to believe in the great possibilities of their own city, even though they are looking at the absolute evidence. But that's the way some people were born, and they would not be happy otherwise.

The sweet girl graduates are the fairest flowers of May, and it must be a source of great joy to the teacher who has had the God-given privilege of cultivating the garden.

The municipal affairs committee has made a report to the directors of the Commercial Club recommending the question of commission government be put up to the voters.

No rain reported in any part of the state yesterday. Mr. Bunnemeyer, like The Eagle editor, is evidently enjoying an outing on the coast.

Membership in the Commercial Club is a vote for your city. Non-membership is negative.

It looks like commission form of government for Bryan.

The Church and Wealth.

At the opening session of the State Christian Missionary Convention in this city Monday, President E. C. Mobley of Gainesville is quoted as saying: "Christ is better understood and more generally accepted now than at any former period in the history of the world, still the church is lagging behind in the procession in the onward march of men. Many men who believe in Christ have no use for the church. The church is out of sympathy with modern industrial conditions. When 20,000,000 men and women work for less than a living it is time the church took notice. Christ labored among the poor, but it can not be denied that the church is catering to the rich. * * * It is the church's work to apply Christianity to modern conditions, to regenerate human society by the application of the principles of Christianity."

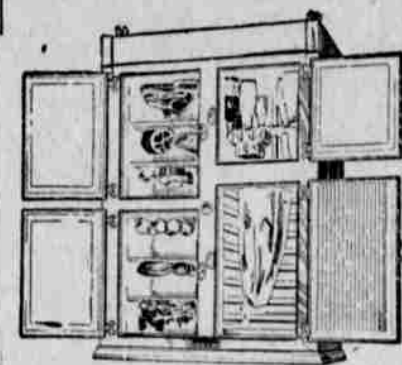

This is a pretty courageous statement for an ordained minister of the gospel to make, but it can hardly be successfully contested by the application of easily discernible facts to prevailing conditions. Jesus of Nazareth is undoubtedly becoming better and more generally understood in this age than at any previous period of the Christian era, but at the same time the fact can not be hid that many men who believe in Him and endorse His teachings "have no use for the church." Dr. Mobley correctly states what is, perhaps, the chief reason.

In the cities the church is out of touch with the tolling masses, and in the country it keeps in touch with them largely by agitation of questions that were not designed by the founder of Christianity to be included in the gospel message and because it affords the means of gratifying the social instinct of man to mingle with his fellows. In the city this craving is not wholly dependent upon the church for its gratification.

By getting closer to the industrial masses in the great centers of population by means of organized activities potential to relieve working and living conditions, the church may regain some of its lost ground, but to do so it must abandon certain activities that in effect act coercively through the machinery of state government to force its views upon the people.

It can bring the application of the principle of Christianity to their rightful operations in government effectually only by rigid adherence both in preaching and practice to the cardinal doctrines enunciated by the Great Head of the Church to regenerate human society. By so doing the church may perform a much greater service in the evolution of civilization than it is now rendering.—Houston Post.

Arizona for Taft?

Phoenix, Ariz., May 25.—Delegates will be chosen in the various counties of the new state today to the state convention at Tucson on June 3, when Arizona's delegation to Chicago will be named. The republican state executive committee is almost solidly for Taft, having endorsed the administration by a vote of 9 to 3. Friends of the president say he is certain of Arizona, but the Roosevelt supporters declare that popular sentiment is all for the rough rider and that only steam-roller methods will win for the president.
